Ukraine's Black Sea trade has collapsed

Russian attacks on shipping have sharply cut traffic through Ukraine's deep-water ports, says Lloyd's List Intelligence.

Ports, vessels and logistics under attack

The strikes hit more than ships. Ports and the logistics infrastructure behind grain exports are being targeted too.

Grain exports have stalled

Stalled Ukrainian shipments remove a major share of world wheat and corn export supply from the market.

Farmers need cash for next season

Lower domestic prices and cash shortages in Ukraine add pressure on farmers preparing for the next planting season.

The takeaway for buyers

Wheat and corn supply from the Black Sea is under strain. If your formulas lean on either, it's a supply line to watch.
